THE THEATERS.

GRAND OPERA-HOUSE.

"Fun on the Bristol," Jarrett & Rice" new musical comedy, was presented last night to an audience that completely filled the house. It was a decided hit from the first, and the audience left delighted with it. There is no pretension to depth of plot, but it sparkles with tun and one laughs but it sparkles with run and one laughs and laughs again and can not help being delighted. The piece is somewhat after the style of the "Tourists," only more so.

It is comedy, opera, tragedy and a little of everything else pertaining to the stage, all nicely woven with a web of fun with just plot enough to carry the connection from one act to the other. The company is a very fine one and herein is the secret. is a very fine one and herein is the secret of the success of such a piece. Well done, it is immense; poorly done, it would be intolerable. "Fun on the Bristol" will be presented every night and at matiness Wednesday and Saturday afternoons.

THE MINSTRELS AT PIKE'S.

Harry Clapham always brings a good minstrel troupe. He is just that kind of a man and no other. People who went to see the Barlow, Wilson, Primrose & West Minstreis last night expected a good show, but we doubt if there was one there who was not surprised and delighted at the excellence of the troupe.

The old favorites are there, but there are many new features and all is pure min-strelsy of the old type that always finds most admirers. Cal Wagner and Eddie Fox are great additions to the company. We shall have more to say of the details of the show later. Just now we will only observe, "go and see for yourself and you will be glad of it." Every night and matinees Wednesday and Saturday afternoons. HEUCK'S OPERA-HOUSE.

There was a fine I ouse at Heuck's las evening, attracted by the opening of the Rentz-Santley Novelty Company. Since their previous visit last fall the entertainment has been made almost de novo by the addition of new songs, new faces and a new burle-que. Among the leading new people are Miss Lizzie Parker, formerly one of the Parker Sisters, who appeared in songs and dances; Mr. Sam Holdsworth, who has recently returned from England, in descriptive songs, appropriately costumed, and Messrs. Quilter and Goldrich, the famous song and dance men. The old favorites Sandford and Wilson, Lew. Benedict, Frank Bennett, Charles and Annie Whiting, Nim-mie Kent, Mabel Santley, Rosa Lee, Fannie Florence and Lulu Mortimer were still to the fore to amuse and please. The bur-lesque of "Penn's Aunts" was written by Mr. Sidney Rosenfeld, author of "Dr. Clyde," and the music, which is quite sparking and pretty, was the composition of Mr. Will. Vandewater. Both are quite clever, and much superior to the average of minstrel burlettes.

VINE-STREET OPERA-HOUSE This popular, and at present only variety theater in the city, had a very flattering Monday night house last evening. The bill, as is characteristic of the house in that respect at all times, was first-class. The entertainment was introduced by a minstrel first part, which was quite entertaining in both musical and comic features, Miss Katie Downs folloring in a budget of popular songs, which were very handsomely received were very handsomely received by the audience. Mr. Geo. Henry's comi-cal sayings and Ethiopian character de-lineations were very good. Miss Ada Lynwood captured the entire audience with her beautiful ballads, sung with that lady's usual sweetness of tone. The feats of jugglery by the Ordeys surpassed any thing of the kind presented at this house before. The performance concluded with the somewhat amusing burlesque on Pina-fore termed, "His Majesty's Safety Pin,"

The jury, after being sworn, were instructed by the Court. His Honor dwelt at length upon the various crimes that would come before them, especially on the Sunday question. He said the law does not say that all labor must close on Sunday, but only that which is unnecessary. The law was not intended to annoy and oppress the people. It was merely intended that the seventh day should be a day of rest one on which all unnessary labor should or for the wealthy man to drive out in his carriage for recreation, or the grocery man may open his store to convenience his neighbor who had perhaps forgotten to lay in a supply on Saturday night. The severity with which some people were anxious to enforce the law was no doubt caused by the very small criminal docket, smaller than it has been for twenty years and which gave such people were years, and which gave such people more leisure to look after their neighbors' business. But that portion of the law closing saloons on Sunday must be enforced, not because it is intended to persecute the saloon-keepers, but for the protection of young men who might otherwise be law-
